Level 128

EDIT

Level 128: Space Command Centre

Level 128 is a series of control rooms for what appears to be a space operation. The control panels are retro and outdated, appearing to be dated from the early 70s to late 80s. The control panels have a myriad of switches, levers, knobs, and dials – interacting with them seems to have little function upon anything. Output screens, flashing lights, and speakers emitting white noise or a series of beeps are also present on these dashboards that may change in response to inputs, although this does not seem to correlate to any external changes. Chairs of varying appearance, ranging from comfy command chairs to simple stools are present in front of the terminals. Bigger screens and speakers exist at the front of rooms, displaying abstract patterns of data or emitting various intelligible commands. The rooms are generally cluttered with a variety of tech the machinery.
